For those people who live there, Grand Rapids is understandably a city to be taken for granted. For those who come from Sumas, or from Denver, or from Paterson, or from anywhere else it is almost disappointing in its colorlessness. The concrete artistry of its expressways does not hide their awesome efficiency. Its business districts are acceptable. Its symphony, though seldom brilliant, is generally good. The complexion of Grand Rapids is that of the complacent midwest metropolis, with neat rectangular streets and avenues seemingly denying any chance of a personality. But underneath this facade, the city has a heart of its own, even though the Calvin student may find no more than Calvin College as that heart.

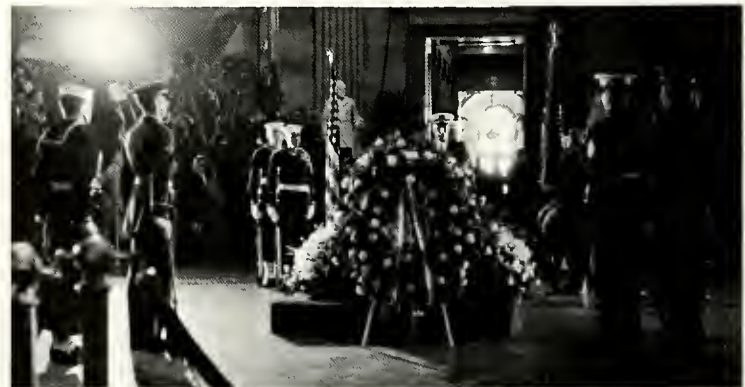

Friday, November 22 was not significantly different than any other day at Calvin College, except that the weather was gloomy and depressing. But that didn't make much difference, because Thanksgiving vacation was approaching and it was, after all, Friday. Then the news came. At first it was only a wild rumor—somebody's idea of a joke, and, for that matter, in very poor taste. But the complex communications system of the twentieth century does not tell lies. John Kennedy had in fact been shot, and was lying near death in Dallas, Texas. Students crowded around in the Commons, looking at the floor or staring into space. No one said much, because no one had anything to say. And as they waited for the inevitable news no one really doubted that he would die, but no one yet believed that he had been shot. The emotional ones cried; the others sat shocked and imitated; and even the cynics looked disgusted. No one smiled, and those who tried to say "the show must go on" got only cold stares from others—even from those who were too big to cry. Some students went to Washington D.C. to pay tribute to a man they had never known personally, but whose loss hurt as if he had been a brother. Others stayed in Grand Rapids and watched on their television sets as history happened in front of them—the videotaped swearing-in of Johnson, the stupid murder of Oswald, the funeral; Mrs. Kennedy and her two forlorn children, the Navy hymn, the caisson, Cardinal Cushing, the eternal flame, and countless commentaries. . . . No one has yet answered the question "why?" Perhaps no one ever will.

The value of service rendered does not display itself until the benefit of that service is no longer to be had. We acknowledge this incongruity and we recognize another—that of offering a picture and a few picas of prose as a tribute to forty-five years of service rendered to Calvin College. First as a teacher and then as an administrator, Dr. Henry J. Ryskamp has figured in the consequence that today is Calvin College. The college is no less for having his mature insight and keen wit in its allegiance. And because he is such a man, we come to him unabashed, with our pictures and our prose. Having nothing else, we give this book to Dean Ryskamp.

DR. HENRY J. RYSKAMP

To generations of students Calvin College has been the Franklin campus: the cupola lit up at night, the crowded reference room of the library, the peculiar smell of the gymnasium, the Commons. Now that tradition is being gradually replaced by the functional beauty of Knollcrest. But in spite of its inadequacies, the Franklin campus has served thousands of students well; and even now in its last few years, it reminds the student that "campus" and "college" are not synonymous.

If beautiful buildings and architectural finesse make a college good, Knollcrest is great. The symmetry of the residence halls have an aesthetic appeal that is not found on the "old campus," and the magnificent modern structure of the library seems to form a fitting contrast with the thousands of musty old theological volumes on the neat shelves. Yet it is not architects who build colleges. The beauty of the Knollcrest campus must be a challenge: its unquestioned excellence must be combined with an excellence which can be provided by students alone to make a college worth more than all the land and money that Knollcrest represents.

How much room does a man need? Less than he thought he did before moving into the dorm. And the girl perhaps finds she needs more than she thought she would. Dorms are funny to move into. In the beginning of September the rows of little cells are bare and severe; but then they begin to expand with something called college life, which is stacks of books, bull sessions, cups of coffee at 1 a.m., room check, a hundred little signs on doors, and bulletin boards that make you wonder . . . about problems, jokes, and the people who write the signs, live in the rooms, drink the coffee, shoot the bull, and read the books.

Not only the new students had to go through registration. In frantic togetherness all shared the experience, whether they had already been subjected to orientation or not. And while the professors sat calmly behind their tables and told students classes were closed, the students wandered off dazedly to line up alphabetically according to size.

We have allowed ourselves irreverent witticisms at convocation and we have strained to be composed and debonair at the mixer, but nevertheless we are impressed by the beginning. We are reminded that the college year will need effort of mind and hand; our experiences will be impressive as well as expressive; we will be loud sometimes and we will be hushed. All of what we hope to do will be in some way rewarding in the doing; much of what we do will achieve its true significance only with the passing of time.

Perhaps we were not all committed, but without a doubt we were all involved. Not only were the rigors and responsibilities of Christian scholarship within the disciplines of an academic community imposed upon Calvin students, not only were we forced to take time out from our pursuit of excellence to deal with the problems of tuition, board, room, new books, and meal tickets, but this year in a new way we were brought face to face with financial reality. Even as we were encouraged to share, we were discouraged to see the cares increase. And then for many of us there was encouragement again as we began to see that being involved meaningfully not only requires but results in meaningful commitment.

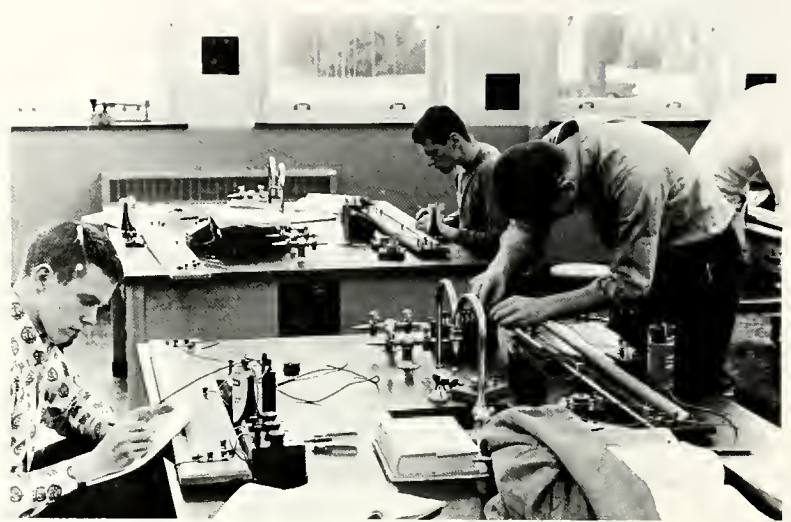

We get to class on time—usually; we get assignments for tomorrow, next week, and sometimes forever; we get to the coffee shops as often as we can; we get involved in long, smoky discussions; we get dates and we sometimes get out of assignments; often we get discouraged and occasionally we get into trouble; we get tested, graded, disciplined and encouraged; we get new insight into faith and facts; and with all our getting we get understanding.

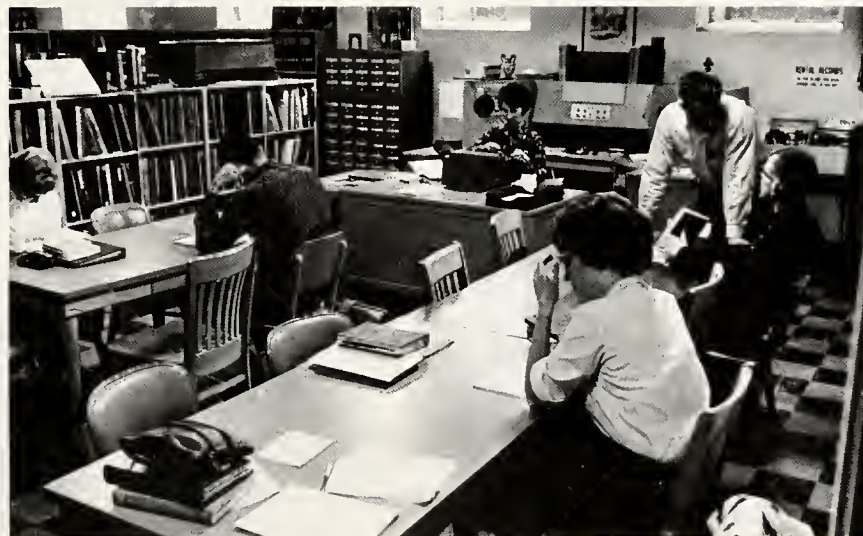

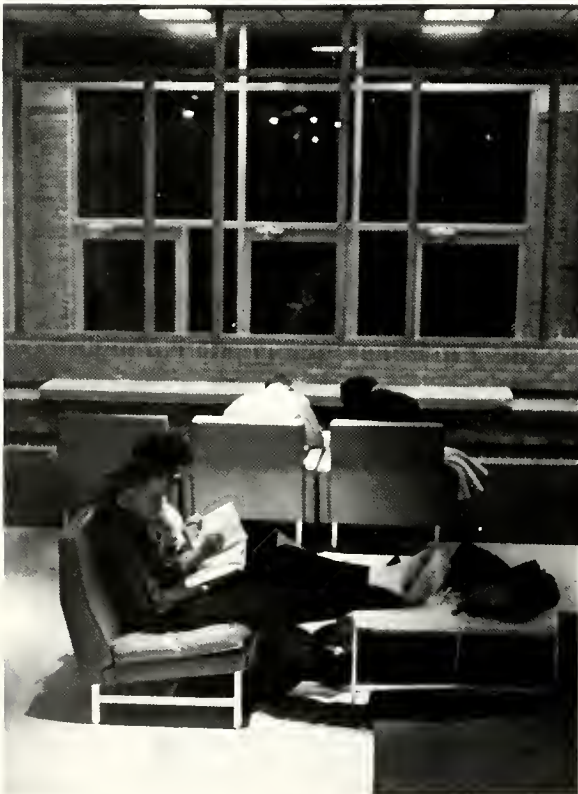

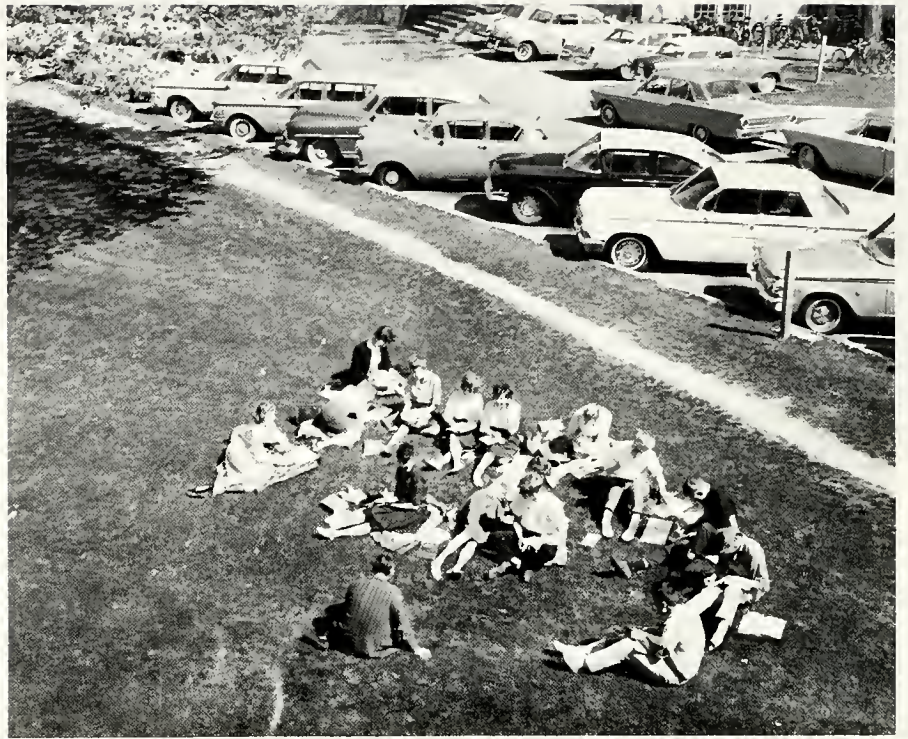

The motley aggregate of student dwellings is perennially intriguing. The elaborate suites of Knollcrest yield to the sparsely furnished cubicles of Sigsbee and Dunham streets as one passes from freshman to upperclassman. Some address themselves to Commons' cuisine, others to their own. Whether a student really lives in his domicile or merely sleeps there, each attempts in some way to establish a pseudo-home in a world quite lacking a home.

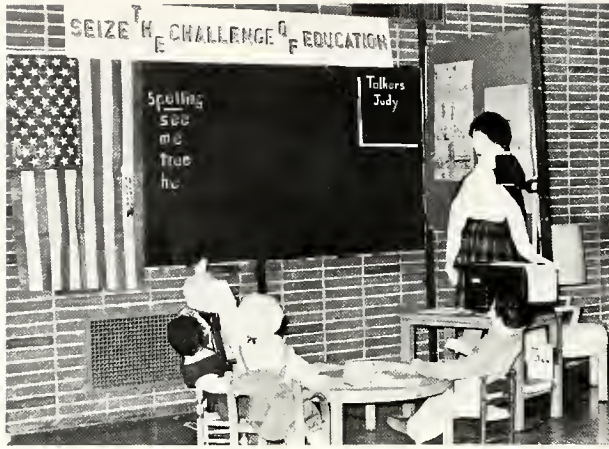

Activity characterized Student Council as it initiated new and various programs. The financial positions of both clubs and classes were improved by legislative assistance from the council. A summer tour of Europe is being sponsored by the council. Several radio programs were also produced. And in between considerations of the new and the novel, the council performed its less glamorous functions such as allocation of funds, approving of budgets, and election of publication heads.

A gracious queen was crowned; Calvin held its first snow carnival; classes, dorms, and clubs erected displays in apathy or ecstasy; the year's first fine arts review appeared; the Hope College basketball team was roundly out-jousted by the Knights—as Calvin welcomed her alumni. Homecoming seems to be the time for poking among the ashes of memory and tradition to discover the Calvin spark and breathe it into an easily visible flame. Though in a sense our attempt is successful, we are aware that no amount of words or papier maché can communicate our pride in our college.

REFORMATION AT CALVIN

Chamber Band

The Calvin College bands under the direction of Professor Harold Geerdes filled the year with concerts and tours. During the spring vacation a band tour through Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin displayed the excellent repertoire which was constructed of many hours of practice and talent.

Concert Band

The Oratorio Society joined for the first time with other musical organizations of the college in the Fall Music Festival. Advent season saw the Society and the Calvin Orchestra unite to present Handel's Messiah. At Calvin a good bit of tradition has grown about this production; still the excellence of the work and its presentation was in no way obscured. And in March, concluding their schedule and departing from a semi-tradition, the society sang Mendelssohn's oratorio, St. Paul, instead of the Elijah.

Perhaps the most rigorous calendar of appearances was that of the A Cappella Choir. Beginning with the Fall Music Festival the choir presented in increasing tempo, two Christmas concerts and concerts in Ohio, New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Ontario and Eastern Michigan while on tour. Immediately following their return, the choir presented four concerts in Western Michigan.

A Cappella Choir

The Radio Choir also took part in the Fall Music Festival, in addition to singing in a reformation rally in Holland Michigan. The Choir toured the Midwestern states in the spring. As in year's past, the choir provided music each Sunday morning for the radio program, "The Back to God Hour."

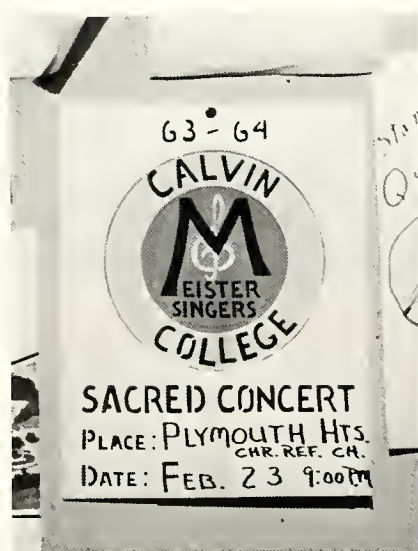

Radio Choir

To introduce religious music of depth and beauty, to sing the good word for our college while on tour, to present the Moonlight Musicale, to worship well—all these things the Meistersingers have attempted to do, and did again this year commendably. The twenty-five men who sang under the direction of student Bob Herrema were rehearsed hard and well, and each was rightly proud of being a Meistersinger.

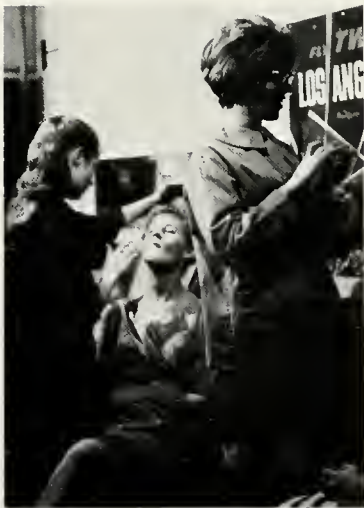

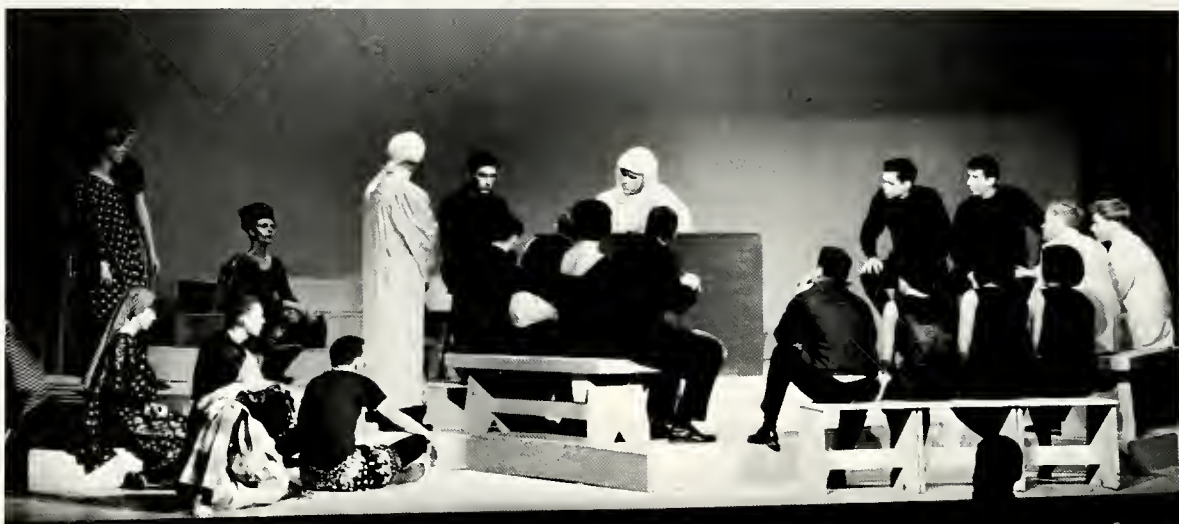

In their fall production the Thespians presented G. Bernard Shaw's satiric comedy, Pygmalion. The ambitious scope of the production was accentuated by the fact that Pygmalion ran on the Broadway stage for more than two years. Heavy demands were made upon the two leading characters by the structuring of the play. Jon Feikens played a brilliantly consistent role as the ego-centric linguist, Henry Higgins. Nancy Bultman was equally superb in the two-in-one role of the flower-girl, Eliza Doolittle. Mrs. Boeve's perceptive casting and the invariably excellent acting of the supporting players combined with the fine lead performances to make the Thespian's autumn effort masterful and memorable indeed.

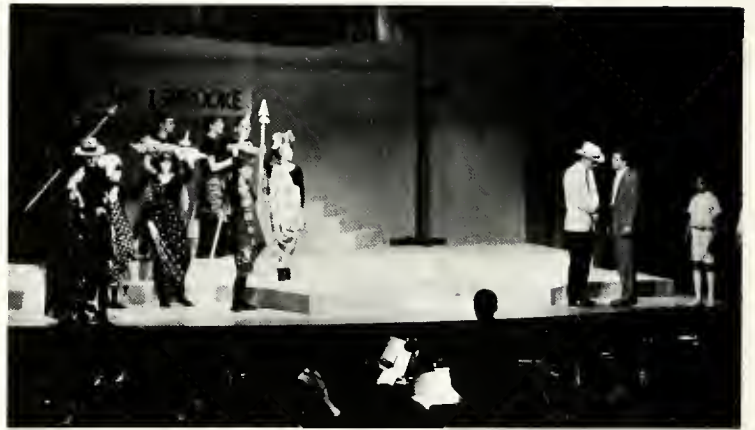

For their spring production the Thespians joined with the music department in presenting Kurt Wiell and Maxwell Anderson's poignant Lost in the Stars. This was the first musical drama presented by the College, and that fact underscored the play's powerful avowal of love's importance in the affairs of men. With calculated restraint Harvey Brink constructed the character of Stephen Kumalo, and Janice Hoekwater's characterization of Irina was especially moving.

In the college lit clubs heavy demands are placed upon words. They are absorbed in the form of novels, drama, and poetry; they are juggled and joined to form new thoughts in the minds of readers; and at last they emerge, perhaps in well-ordered ranks, often in irregular bursts, rushing, hesitating, in heated excitement or cool precision, praising, damning, examining, to be reabsorbed again as discussion. They have been made to tremble and strain and sag with the work of communicating, and hopefully, they will be used to communicate again when the discussions prod the club members to create new novels, new drama, and new poetry.

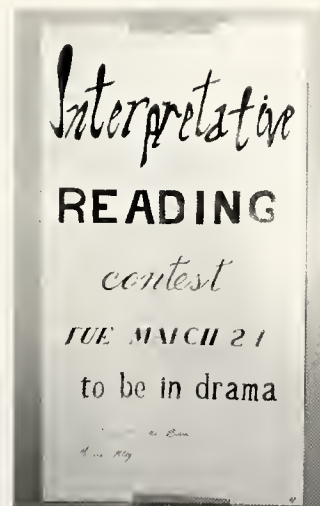

Frustrated by a lack of insurance and snow on their own hill, the Ski Club pursued the purpose for their existence by turning to established resorts. Between semesters they sponsored a trip to the Caberfae Ski Area and one month later to the hills at Eskar.

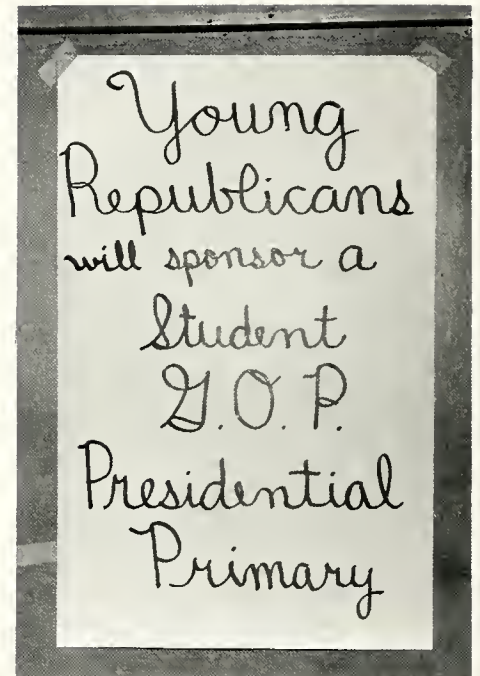

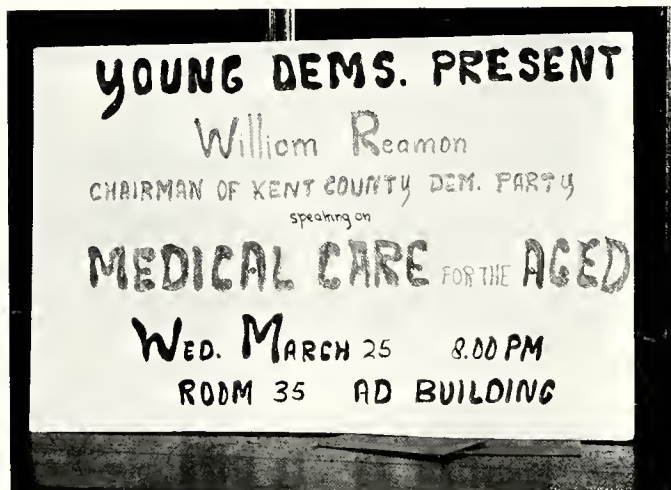

It is important to speak with both skill and integrity. Participants in the college's extra-curricular speech activities are disciplined to meet both these requirements. For some, exhaustive research and a persuasive delivery are most necessary; others work for a sensitive, imaginative presentation of an idea; for each there is the satisfaction of learning to share wisdom, problems, or delight.

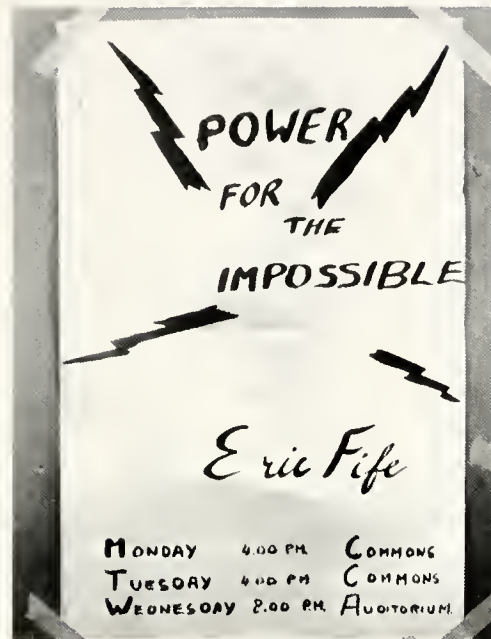

The Young Democrats and Young Republicans organized into their individual groups this year to go about the business of being interested and active in politics. These flowering statesmen held meetings with no more than the usual amount of irregularity, brought speakers to the campus, and discussed the body politic.

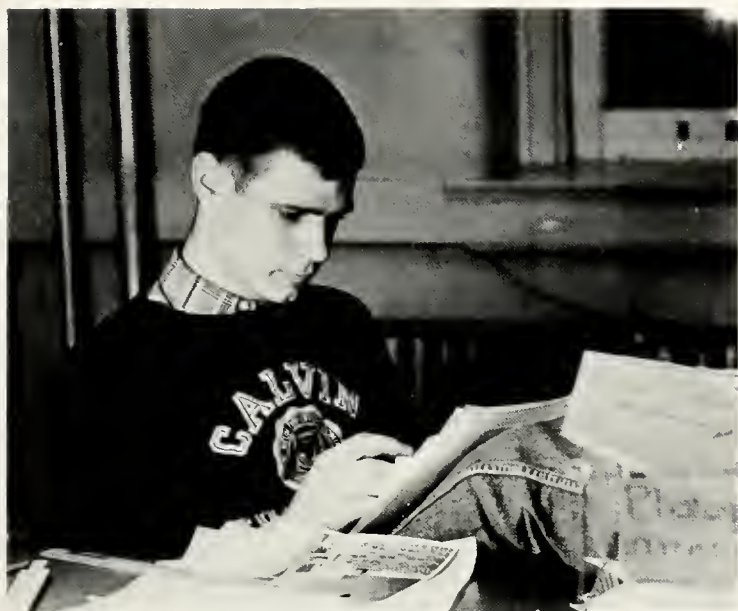

In the fall Religious Emphasis Week featured Dr. Kenneth Pike, professor of Linguistics at the University of Michigan. There was a new shift of emphasis as Dr. Pike focused on the problem of communicating our Christianity especially in the academic community. In chapel and in lectures Dr. Pike discussed the relationship between faith and scholarship, using such illustrations from his field as problems in translating the Bible. In the spring the committee responsible for Religious Emphasis Week planned to bring to the college Dr. Eric Fife, Missionary Director of Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship. This appearance by the noted author and lecturer was unfortunately made impossible by illness.

Great hopes and strong ambitions lose their fine edge amid ping-pongs, contact-sheets, and half-formed organization. Something less than dreams takes its form from deadlines made and broken. The present to be captured makes good its escape to the past, leaving words and pictures, futile markers of that which once was. A year's experience, in still life delineated, inevitably less than real, indeed more than unreal, such is the legacy left to this year, the challenge of the next.

In contrast to the frustrated irregularity of the preceding year, Chimes published consistently and provocatively. Weekly the saga of late hours, back-window entrances, and spontaneous bouts of folk-singing culminated in publication. Chimes did not restrict its scope to the college, but freely addressed itself to events of national, international, and denominational consequence. Often the Chimes could scarcely contain the burgeoning response to its stimulus. More graphic than words however, was the testimony mutely presented by the battered copies of ingested Chimes beneath half-filled cups on snack-shop tables.

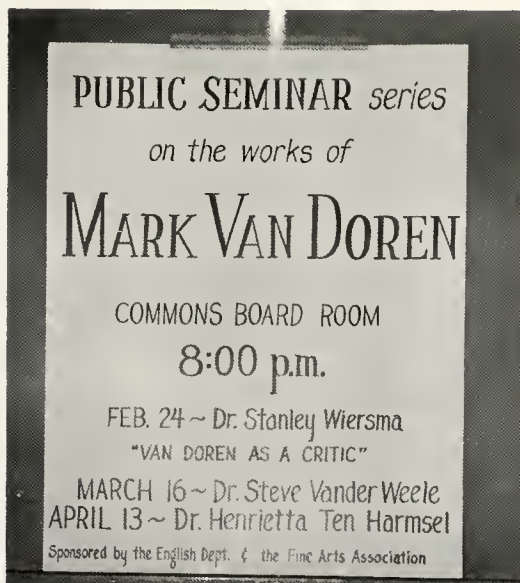

Harold Bontekoe, editor

Messages in unique and carefully worked arrangements of words, notes and colors were communicated to the public as collegiate Calvinists participated in the arts during the Fine Arts Festival. Our commitment has not changed but we search for the satisfaction of a witness that demands attention, speaks pointedly, and needs not be ashamed.

WALKING SHADOWS

bruised beetle
 blinded by the light that brained him crawls off to nowhere
 claws
 his way to exhaustion

moth who lost her colors in the rain turns her drained face from the glass feels the self through her numb fingers slipping hawk whose flying feathers blazed limbs about his twisted cage rages for his crippled fate screams

 afraid he may not die nor heal

starling from the martin house derides the town the lion sleeps outside disturbed by echoes the sick aged dog stares the night away

they grieve the spider where he hangs who worked and shivered in the dying sun
 whose corpse still spins about the random dust

Ronald Spoelman

HE FEARS THE AIR

He fears the air with its streptococcism,
The ethereal parasitism belaying him
Where he lies in a hundred-fathom airless hole
And lives on bottled gas.
All through the darkness of his dread,
He whimpered in his fear
And wished upon a hundred-fathom star
That either air or fear would vanish,
Or better still, that thing that in the air
Is thriving. He had been taught at the age
Of three how to wish upon a star.

Leon Schaddalee

TO COME WE ARE

The light grows quieter now.
The colors meld.
A failing flower.
A breath held
Against the sharp needle pain.
Points, knives of light jut up
Crashing, tinkling, burst again, Jut:
Prisms cut twinkling light making tight spectrums, pulling Then,
My memory of you shoots through:
Licking you clean
When you were new-pink and stiff from birth,
The brush-tangle strangling
Your innocent fight.
Scratching your itching skull
When black oak bark cut your delicate skin.
But then
Time swelled and you, not needing me,
Went sleeking through the meadows,
Young-brown and lean,
The cool white lilies stretching and swaying
To touch your fur.
Later, and little seen:
Rising from the mosses of the forest floor
Horned and most-high,
Thrusting yourself into the dark, making royal our joy,
The night you became king-deer.
But
Spikes and splinters of light color-spangle before me
Stiff and tight. Once again.
Then drifting back and forth
And sliding into when.

Susan Feikens

SNOW POEM

We slept while the snow fell.
Morning came and none could tell
Which way led to Heaven which to Hell.

The Children cried, Let's go sledding,
Forgetting the important wedding.

We need not seek our way—
The groom will come with Snowplow
so they say.

Eric Beversluis

Receipt of knowledge is not restricted to the classroom. Learning takes a fuller dimension when it is received from those who came with us to learn. Our committment is common, our goals diversified; holding to both, we learn with each other from each other.

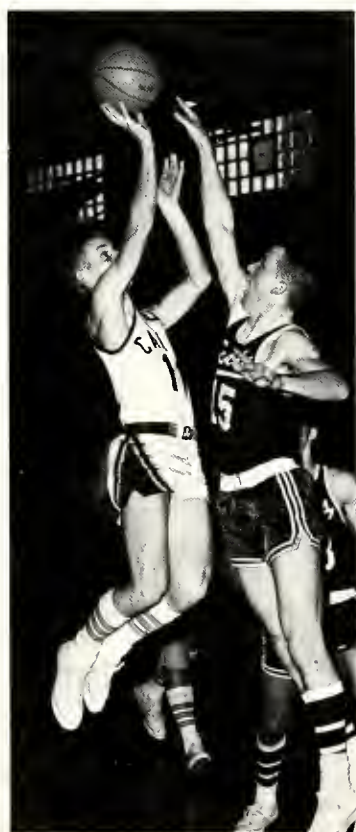

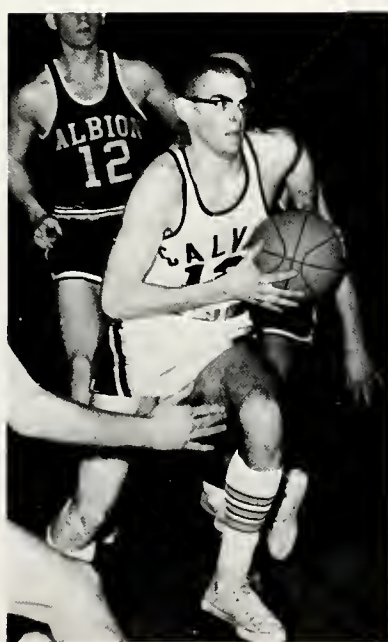

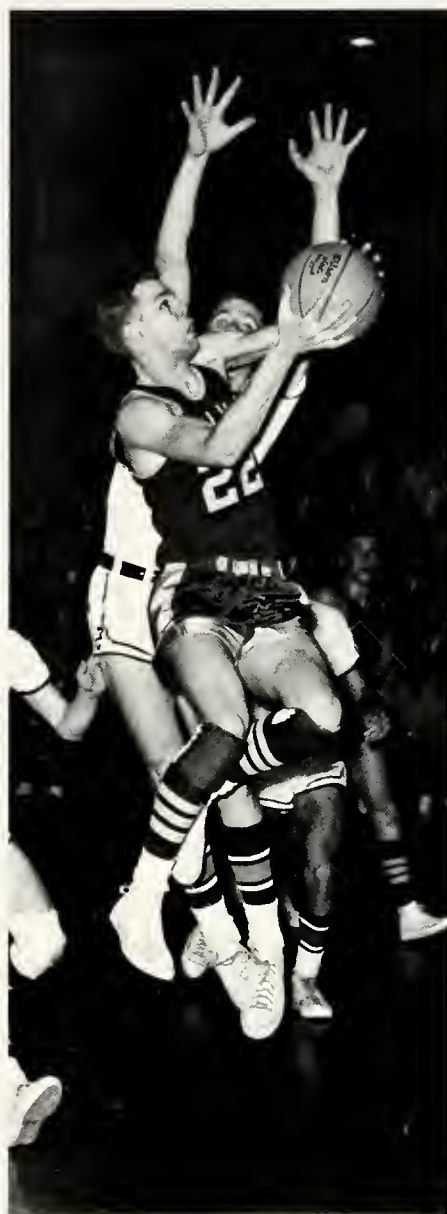

Disguised with apologetic phrases like "rebuilding year" and "but it's a young team," whispered rumors predicted a bad year for basketball. But Dr. Barney Steen coached his youthful team through a formidable gantlet of games that resulted in an unexpected championship in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association. Alma, runner-up in the conference, gave Calvin its only MIAA defeat of the season.

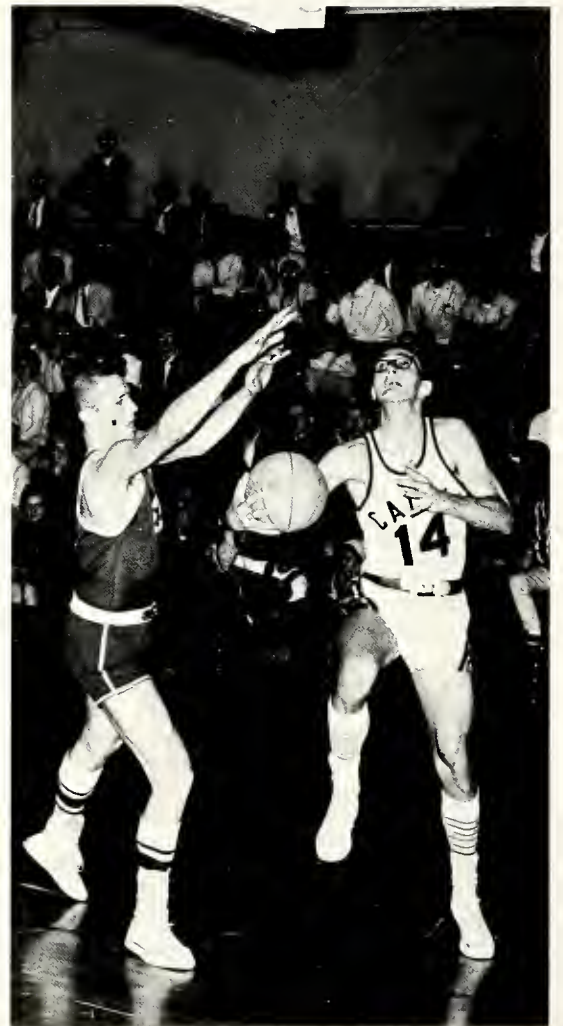

During the unexpectedly successful season four Calvin records were broken. Senior Jim Van Eerden was the high scorer for the Knights, setting new records in the number of field goals and total points scored in one season. Other records that toppled under the powerful Knights were the total team points per season and the average points per game. An additional honor gained by the Knights was the selection of Jim Van Eerden and Ken Fletcher for the All-MIAA team.

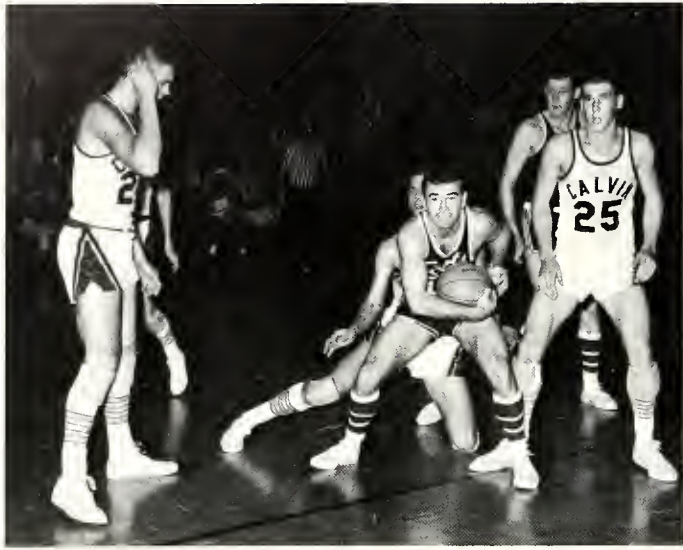

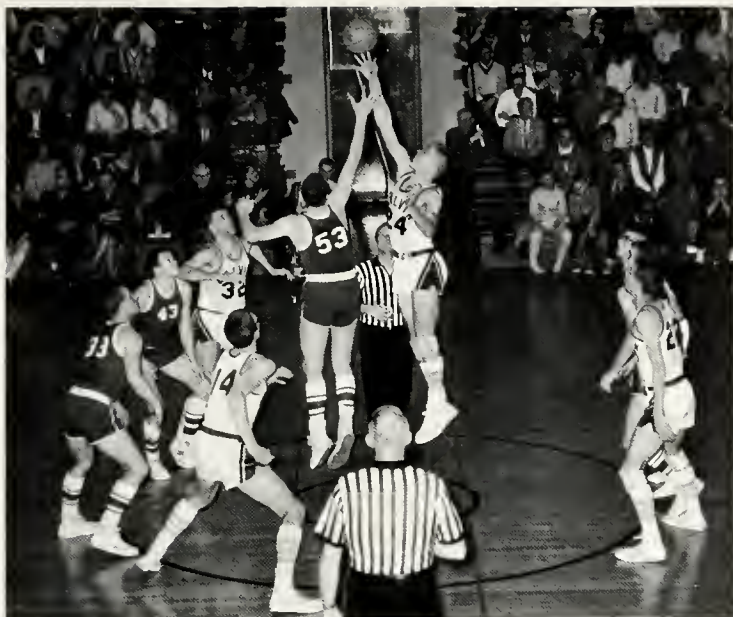

The Junior Varsity basketball team serves as a training ground for future varsity players and provides the varsity squad with reserve strength when needed. During this season the JV team scored eight wins and five losses, beating Hope three times, Kalamazoo twice, and scoring an important win against the University of Detroit. Outstanding on the JV team this year were Chris Zichterman and Tom Brandt, who led the Knights in both shooting and rebounding.

Paced by seniors Raymond Hommes and Fred Kamper, the cross-country team defeated all of their opponents in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association during the season and swept the championship meet for the 1963 MIAA cross-country crown. In spite of injuries, the Knight runners placed sixth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association meet, capping one of the most successful seasons in Calvin's cross-country history.

After losing several key men from last year's championship team, the Calvin soccermen sought to rebuild their strength this year. Against rugged competition, the young team compiled a record of five wins, four losses, and one tie during the season. Behind the powerful scoring drives of Bert Wolf and the excellent defense work of Hugh Cook, the Knights finished third in the Eastern division of the Midwest Soccer Conference.

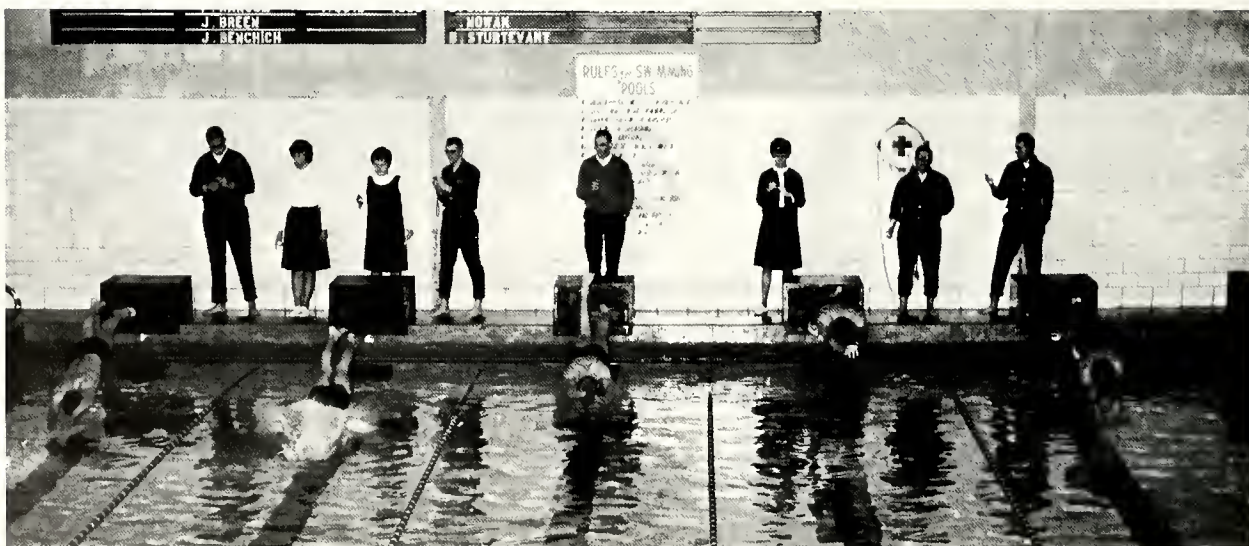

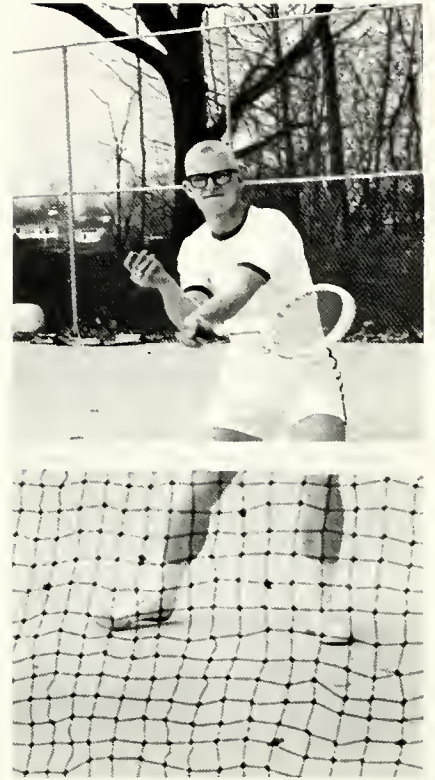

Led by three returning veterans Paul Bergsma, John Le Grand, and captain George Ottenhoff, the Knight swimming team improved considerably this year. Although handicapped by having to travel to the Central YMCA for afternoon practices, the team managed to take two victories in twelve dual meets.

Calvin's golf team, a rising power in the MIAA, prepared early to face their nine-meet schedule. A core of returning veterans, including one of the league's top golf players, sophomore Paul Tuls, showed promise for a fine season with hopes of an MIAA championship.

On the strength of a few returning veterans and a training trip to Miami, the tennis team prepared to help Calvin toward its first MIAA All-sports trophy. Freshmen on the team appeared promising and hopes for an improvement over last year's third place MIAA score were high.

The baseball team prepared early for their annual gantlet of games, which included six league games and four outside the MIAA. Their trip to the South during Spring vacation helped to prepare the Knights, physically and psychologically, for their attempt at climbing out of the MIAA cellar.

Taking advantage of a warm winter and an early spring, the Calvin track and field team prepared to defend their position at the top of the MIAA. The track and field team have won four consecutive MIAA championships, and prospects at the beginning of this season looked good for another.

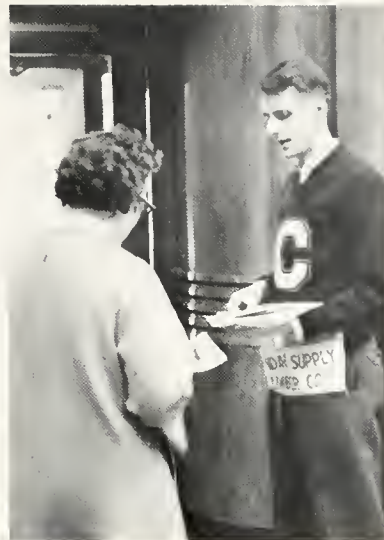

With the incentives of interclass rivalry and personal glory, the intramural sports program provided spare-time activities for a large segment of the Calvin student body. Armchair track stars competed in a co-educational track meet; would-be harriers were rewarded with groceries in the turkey trot; and pseudo-athletes of all sorts sought honors in football, basketball, volleyball, soccer, badminton and baseball. The vivid spectrum of intramural sports also included table tennis, a free-throw contest, and slo-pitch softball.

The Varsity Club was responsible for the confused tensions of Twirp Night, the hilarity of the Varsity Varieties, and the programs upon which we wrought our wrath or rejoicing at each home game.

The Place . . . where caffeine is consumed in quantity as coffee and coke, where conversations go in circles as perfect as saucers, where fortunes reside in the bottoms of coffee-cups and peanut-butter sandwiches take on a universal significance. The rush subsides and the residue is desolation. Soggy cigarette butts obscure the fortunes in empty cups and sticky coke glasses are half concealed by crumpled wrappers of peanut-butter sandwiches. Issues have been decided, new relationships discerned, time spent (some of it wisely) . . . and we will return again to spend more.

A shocking event in Alabama urged Calvin students to join the community in a protest march quite silent in its incidence, quite vocal in its intent. Some came out of mere curiosity, some sought relief from boredom, and some may have forgotten the real issue, but all were inevitably touched by a realization of how great an injustice man can do to man.

Each of us comes—either to this city, or from it—sometimes seeking something, sometimes nothing. Each of us gives to this city—sometimes something, sometimes nothing. And to each is given the impersonal toleration due to our unsolicited residence.

The vivid brightness of college days fades with their passing. The colors dim and soften; events and places lose their distinction in the meld formed by memory. The whole of college experience becomes suffused with the bitter sweetness peculiar to the remembrance of golden days past. Sometimes the light shines again briefly, former times present themselves in clarity; then the moment passes, and with a gentle pang the present returns. And although we would not barter the future for the past, we do not resent the agent which fleetingly brings the past into a sharper focus. In the hope that they will be such an agent, the following pages highlight the places, the events, the colors of a year now gone.

To many the Franklin street site is already the "old campus." And the "oldsters" who once took pride in their new, ultramodern Administration Building look with a touch of nostalgia at the cracked mortar, the crumbling bricks, the chipped, faded paint. A few miles away solid brick buildings rise from the ground, expansive tennis courts are laid, and parking lots are shaved out of a hillside. The rapid growth is often painful, but vitally necessary.

Lectures, chapels, homework—the mechanics of education impose a regularity upon the kaleidoscopic pattern of life at college. The imposition is a rigorous one, demanding much. Rebellion, imposition's offspring, is sometimes evident, but more often, through the clutter of responsibilities met or side-stepped, comes a new maturity adequately replacing the old.

All art is a long and arduous baptism, a process by which human beings lend life and meaning to inanimate objects. Artists work with stubbornly inert things—stiff brushes and barren canvases, dead words and white paper, a fixed scale and a silent instrument. The painful ecstasy begins when a person infuses a part of himself into these objects, creating a living thing.

The heritage of Calvin invests a part of itself in the quarternote and the treble clef. Rehearsal follows rehearsal, organizations combine their efforts, and a heritage receives expression in a festival of music.

The pounding chest, the snap of the tape, the strong arm cutting the water, the long putt, the well-timed pass, the clean catch, the accurate serve, the well-placed kick, the ball splitting the net, the loft of the shot, the solid thud of the racket—each is a brief, fragmentary glimpse of immortality.

The lure of a world where life is young provides the impetus for an annual Homecoming. Alumni return "home," recalling the brightness of a world they once possessed. Tradition, that mixture of memory and habit, has its day and its presence at each homecoming activity seeks to convince the returning alumni that they are completely welcome in a place to which they by their leaving are foreign.

There is indeed a time of leisure when books give place to magazines, coffee, or snatches of sleep. Test tubes, papers, notebooks, the equipment of academics is put away as friendships are sustained, new friendships are formed, and the mind at rest still develops.

*And so a year passes; places, events, and colors become memories or prints on Prism pages. The memories go unattended, the pages unobserved. The intense relevance of the present excludes the relevance that has been. But in a day far hence, when hopes have been realized, when the dreams have taken form, it will be well to look back and say these are the hopes and dreams
. . . these are the people.*

STUDENTS

Buildings and machines, faculty and administration underline the existence of students. The faces of Calvin students are many; the paths opening before them are various, each having its own peculiar appeal. The choice must be made; behind, the contemporary success ethic urges; in front, the command toward perfection beckons. In a world cluttered with blue-books and papers, lighted by friendships swiftly made, potentials are discovered, dreams are fostered, and goals are established. Growth and subsequent change are everywhere in evidence. Here only the change of an instant has been caught and held. The process has gone on, leaving to these pages the task of telling what once has been.

IN MEMORIAM

DONALD W. GABRIELSON
1942-1963

For I am already being offered, and the time of my departure is come. I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness . . .

In pointing to the cross the Seminary would lead us to a fuller understanding of that which we ultimately cannot comprehend. It would direct into useful and meaningful service lives committed to the power of this cross.

calvin Seminary

Pericopes, bluebooks, minute theological distinctions: all seem at times to obscure Him whom we seek to serve. Finally, amid what seems humdrum and unrelated to our purpose, we recognize that service demands preparation.

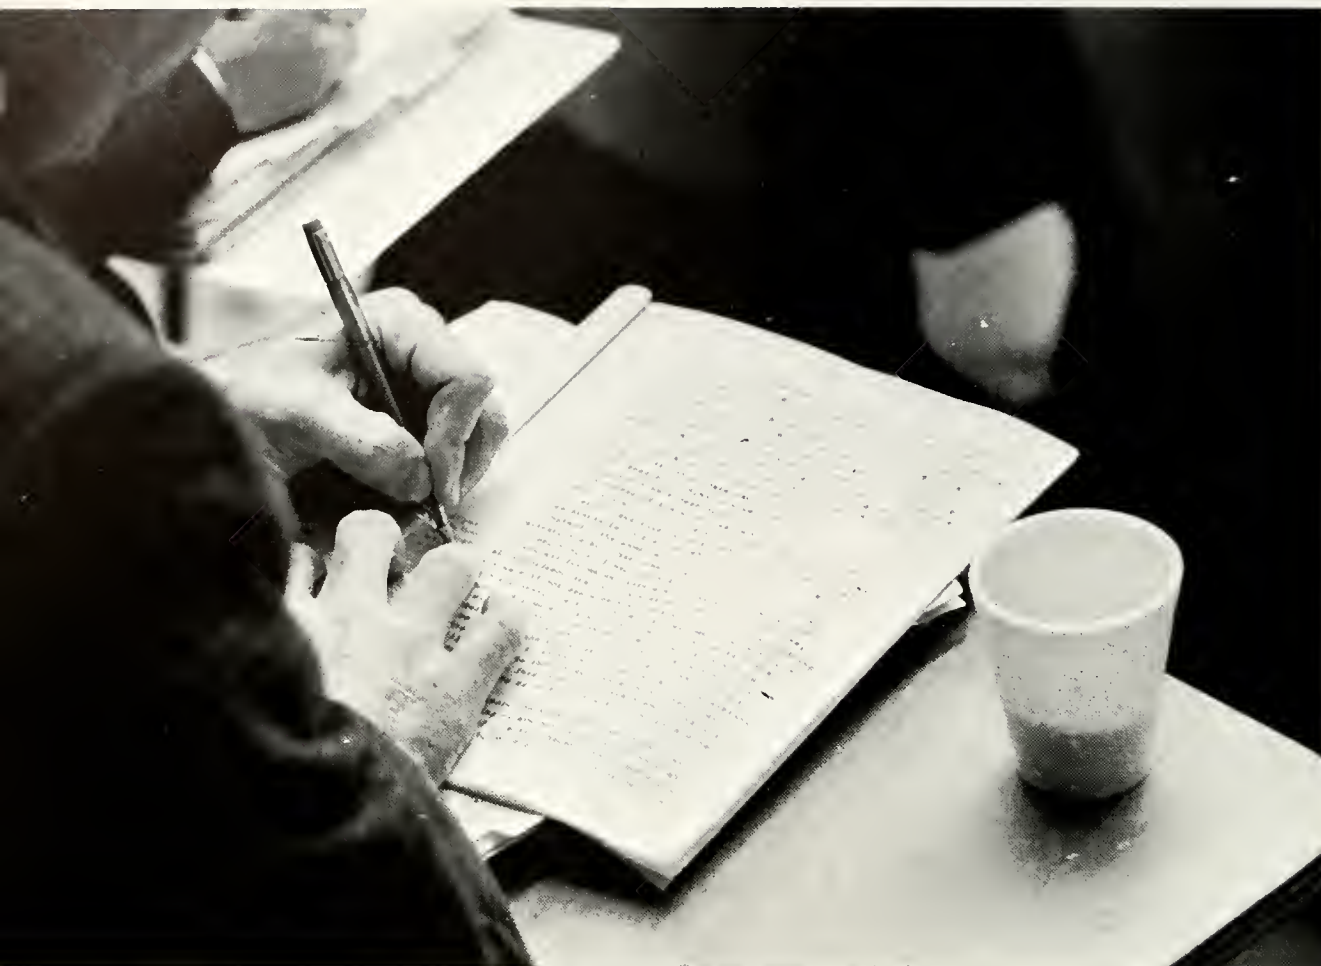

Essential to any knowledge about God is personal devotion to Him. In worship we are reminded that our academic pursuits are only means to an end, not the end itself.

Pleasant surroundings do not remove the harsh reality that much study can become a weariness to the flesh. Though often we feel that the demands upon us are greater than our collective abilities, the hope remains that with much study we will also come to a better understanding of the Truth.

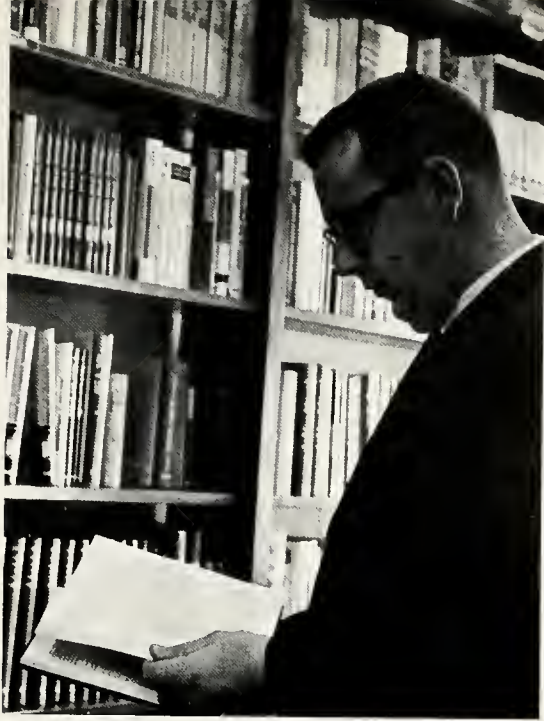

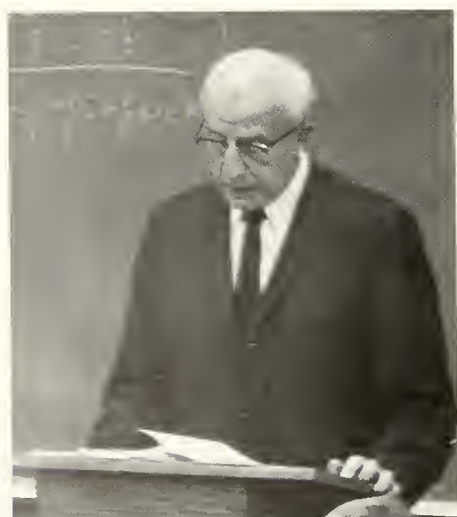

A game of ping-pong, a cup of coffee, a conversation: all provide a few moments of relaxation between the inevitable classes, papers, tests, and preaching assignments.
